

What's All This About Crystals?

Crystals are geometric forms of minerals and light found all over the Earth. One of their significant scientific applications comes from the “piezoelectric affect”. When oscillating electrical impulses interact with quartz, corresponding mechanical oscillations occur in the quartz; the mechanical vibrations cause movement and correlating emissions of sound. Conversely, when pressure waves such as sound or mechanical pressure interact with the quartz matrix, corresponding electrical impulses are stimulated. This property is the basis of their use in computers, missile guidance systems, and watches.

Crystals are the oldest shamanic tool, found in all indigenous cultures. The great myths of our ancient history include the use of crystals for generating power and providing communication for an entire civilization (Atlantis). There are dozens of references in Christianity's Bible to the use of crystals in the scepters, rings, and breastplates of the High Priest, and in the crowns of kings. Marcel Vogel, who pioneered the development of the silicon chip for IBM, continued his research after corporate retirement and created an exacting technology of cut quartz crystals designed for very specific applications, from tuning to spiritual guidance to extracting interfering energies from bodies. After Chernobyl, the most effective medicine for treatment of radiation illnesses was from the Tibetan lineage and contained ground crystals.

The various mineral contents and colors of crystals have been found to correspond to affects on humans, for example, amethyst for tuning in to spirit, carnelian to heal the heart, citrine for protection and to augment personal power. Elestial crystals, from Minas Gerais Brazil, are formed in water and are particularly effective in soothing and balancing the human emotional body. Many have documented the uses of the various stones, including Melody, a nuclear physicist, in her Love Is In the Earth books. The ancient art of “laying on of stones”, beautifully demonstrated by Katrina Raphael in her Crystal Healing Trilogy, reflects this system of belief.

The degree of spiral of the energy in a quartz crystal point is the same degree of spiral as the blood in our veins. We are carbon based life forms becoming silica, crystalline. The use of calcium based crystals is particularly effective in energy work because one of the primary neurotransmitters in the human body is calcium. The resonance of calcium unites the two for healing.

Crystals are said to hold the perfection of spiritual purity, to facilitate focus, and even to record information. Some experience them as living, intelligent light.

By Trinity Thomas 2007

Quote on Hands-On Healing Work with Crystals

(Use in hands-on work, is work with the polarized or “polarity” energy nature of the human body, planet and crystals themselves – Trinity note. Also, spacing and parentheses added.)

*From Patterns of the Whole Volume I – Healing and Quartz Crystals, by John Rea

“The exact nature of the polarity exchange is little understood in your time, it is dependent on adjustments of minute detail from the point of view of Soul at the time of the actual polarizing. It does not take place automatically, but rather appears to take place automatically as the Souls of both people, the treated as well as the therapist, adjust the energies of both to fit the needs of the moment.

Crystals can be used to enhance this process in that they are attuned to work at a “physical” perfection that is only possible for a saint or one with a perfected aura. This is the level of the etheric and the astral, the energy and emotional states of the being respectively. We give you this to know the general reason why all your work with energies, of whatever level, can be enhanced by using crystals, as this is the way crystals work – fine-tuning your energies with their example and the free-flowing channeling they are able to do, as you will be able to do as your energy and light bodies are balanced for you by God and through your own Souls as well.

You are given this work to grow in working with yourself on others, and as you do this work you will grow your own vehicles of expression for your service efforts here on earth at the same time you (facilitate) heal(ing) the vehicles of others, temples as they are to God in love. This healing work you do will use the ability of crystals to oscillate with exact energies or frequencies, if you will, although the energies involved do not have frequencies or intervals at all as you know them, at many levels of their existence: they are instead of an instantaneous nature here on earth, not subject to refraction or reflection in time and space at all, but rather of a wave nature only on the dimension that they themselves exist upon; on other dimensions they may express as instantaneous rather than such continuous flow as light appears to be on earth.

To illustrate, love itself may appear to flow when it takes on appearances of cause and effect on earth, but as a state of being it is instantaneous as the knowing love of God instead of conditional or discontinuous in expression. So it is with the “frequencies” you will find existing in your crystals, as resonance or as instantaneous nature of being in itself.

The goal you have with crystals, by the way, is to be like them.